The Island Cow Country.

(By C. L. Hill.)

A clang of the ship's bell, a clatter of gangplanks, a throb from the mighty engines, and we are cast off, leaving America's shores for a journey which is to take us far across the bounding billows of the Atlantic to a little island in the English channel. Our first landing is made some days later at Southampton, England. The regular passenger and mail boat to the Channel Islands leaves this port three nights a week. So, headed for the birthplace of the Guernsey cow, we leave Southampton on the midnight boat. Early in the morning we awaken to discover that we are approaching Guernsey.

We are surprised at the rough, jagged appearance of the coast line. Great rocks and jutting cliffs loom up like sentinels of death. The ship's mate soon calms our fears about a safe landing and in due course of time we are again on the good old "terra firma."

And now begin our little trips of exploration, for we are curious to see just what kind of a place the Guernsey cow comes from anyhow. Many happy days afield—many interesting and strange sights—we gain a new vision of the meaning of "Guernsey." What are some of these strange sights—just what impressions will we carry back with us to tell our friends?

Acres of glass houses—yes, greenhouses, that's what they are. Would you believe that the greenhouses on the Island of Guernsey would stretch out 800 miles if placed end to end? That's what they say! And what grows in these "glass gardens"? Tomatoes are the largest single crop. During season these are shipped to England every day by the ton. Then they grow potatoes, beans, cucumbers, grapes, figs, pears, peaches, nectarines, French melons—and flowers of many kinds.

Glass houses on wheels! Yes, sir, they have them on the Island. They run on tracks and can be pushed or pulled from one field to another. If a farmer wants to make his crops grow faster he just shoves a glass house over them. When the crop in one field is "doing well"—push—the glass house is moved to the next field.

Oh, the flowers! They are grown outside as well as inside. Fields of yellow jonquils, a perfect mass of golden beauty! No wonder they call the cows, "Golden Guernseys," because even the flowers are golden. The flowers are picked and shipped along with the vegetables every day to England. Down at the wharves on a busy morning, a mile of wagons wait to transfer their cargoes of flowers to the ship's hold.

When the flower season is over the fields are planted to vetches and oats. The cows are tethered there for pasture. Then the same field may grow a crop of turnips, all in the same year. A couple of years this same rotation of three crops may go on and still there is one big unharvested crop—the bulbs. So with spades and bended back, the "toilers" dig them out. A good portion of the bulb crop is shipped to America.

And the cows—yes, those "Golden Guernseys"—what about them? Instead of having a nice, big pasture where she might roam about and eat as she pleases, each cow is tied to a stake by a rope about ten feet long. Every two or three hours the stake is moved a couple of feet and bossie gets fresh forage. Isn't that a "different" way to pasture cows, though? In this way, the "tethered" cow cleans up her little pasture and doesn't waste any feed.

The cows are fed hay and root crops. This is especially true in the north central parts of the Island, where a good deal of the land is below sea level at high tide. In fact there are some fields where "tide" gates close automatically at high tide and open at low tide to let the water drain out. The hay is largely alfalfa mixed with red clover and Italian rye grass. As for roots, the cows eat parsnips, carrots, and mangels.

A hay stack with a roof and a chimney! "I don't believe it," you may say, but nevertheless it's quite true. Hay on the Island is piled in giant stacks out doors. Frequent rains and heavy fogs often make it necessary to cure the hay in the stack. A wooden chimney with sides bored full of holes is placed in the center of the stack to allow the "steam" to escape as the pile "sweats." And over the top, when the sweating and settling are done, the Islander weaves a thatch roof of rye straw to protect the hay from the weather.

Farming in a nutshell describes the agriculture on the Island of Guernsey. The Island is small. The land must work all the time to make a living for the Islanders. That's why they farm under glass so much and why they tether their cows. And that's why they fertilize, because to produce big crops continually the land must be abundantly supplied with plant food. Manure is carefully saved and put back on the land.

Seaweed for fertilizer! Sure, it is no uncommon sight at certain seasons of the year to see groups of farmers down on the seashore at low tide gathering seaweed in a two-wheeled dump cart drawn by—what do you suppose—a yoke of oxen and a team of horses. One man sits on the lead horse, another guides the oxen, and three or four men load the cart.

Oh, yes, we almost forgot to mention the weather. It is fine most of the year—semi-tropical weather. Never very hot, never very cold; a snowstorm is rare. Wouldn't it be a fine place to live, boys and girls? Lots of tourists think so, and the Island is quite a "paradise for tourists."

The only other industry besides agriculture that is of any importance in the homeland of the Guernsey cow is the quarrying of granite. This stone is of an unusually fine quality. The granite "dust" makes splendid roads. In fact there is a fine system of roads and they are kept scrupulously clean. The horse droppings are cleaned off and put right back on the land. As we ride about we find beautiful vine-covered walls lining most of the roads. Flowers run riot over everything, and the foliage is often hidden behind the flowers.

Well, we have had a most interesting stay on the Island of Guernsey.

The Bank of America has made a study devoted primarily to the egg market of Metropolitan New York, and brought out the fact that the annual consumption of eggs in the port of New York district is 156,791,869 dozen, while something like an egg per person, or 5,154,804 eggs are eaten daily. "One of the most significant developments of modern urban life," the study declares, "is the manner in which the entire country is called upon to supply the needs of the great cities."

Ducks and Chicks.

Mrs. Duck: "Son, you mustn't run over there so much and play with those little chicks. Their mother will be sending you home in a hurry one of these times."

Little Duck: "Don't worry, mother, they are brooder chicks and their mother was an incubator."

Pullets that begin to lay in the late fall and early winter are, as a rule, the best producers. They should be marked to be used for breeders the next year.

How We Grow Beets.

Following are abstracts from an address delivered by Leslie E. McIntire, East Waterford, member of executive committee of Maine State Grange, at a round table discussion of home grown foods at the College of Agriculture, Orono, on April 2d:

In the first place we grow beets to feed our cows and heifers during official test work. We have found that while we are feeding an increased amount of grain the adding of beets to the ration made it practically safe to feed this larger amount of grain. I am not advocating the growing of beets because I think they are a cheap crop to grow compared with silage, but you must remember there are many places in Maine where you cannot grow silage corn to good advantage, but could grow beets.

We find the reason for the high cost of growing beets is the large amount of hand labor that has to be used in hoeing, thinning and harvesting the crop.

It is only fair for me to say that what knowledge I may have in growing beets I got many years ago at the College of Agriculture and Farmers' Week from Mr. Osgood who knew how to grow beets for market.

Right here let me say that many farmers all over Maine, if they could come to Orono Farmers' Week with their problems, would get help in solving them, and would also be able to help others, the same as I was helped by Mr. Osgood.

We select a piece of land that was cultivated the year before; corn is a good crop to follow with beets. One of the main things is to have your land as free from weeds as possible.

This land we dress with a good coat of barn manure and plow under in the fall. In the spring we put on another fair coat and pulverize as soon as the ground is right to work, and continue to pulverize as needed until time to plant. We have had the best success with early planted crops, so we plan to get our beets planted some two weeks before our corn.

When the time and land are right to plant we broadcast about 1500 pounds 5-8-7 or 4 8 4 to the acre, and thoroughly work this into the soil. We must remember the beet is a tiny plant when it first comes up out of the ground and must have a fine seed bed. Now comes one of the secrets of beet growing. Perhaps you have already learned; if not, it is this. We take our two horse potato hoe that we hill our potatoes with, and ridge our piece of land as you would hill your potatoes, about thirty inches apart; if there are any loose stones we remove them. Then we take our land roller and roll the piece lengthwise of the rows. Now if we have done our work thoroughly we have got an ideal seed bed, all ready for the hand seed drill, which we set at work as soon as possible, for the reason we want to get the seed into the moist soil at once, for the nature of the beet seed calls for moisture as well as heat to make it germinate and come up quickly. I have said nothing about quality of seed, for I assume we all realize we must have the best. In due time if we have done our work well and the seed was good, weather favorable, we will have a stand of beets; if we should have a light frost after they are up they will not mind it.

As soon as you can see the plants you can go through with a one horse cultivator set narrow, and follow with the hoe and cut any weeds on the side of the ridge, and follow this method as often as necessary until time to thin; that is when it takes a lot of time and care to do it right. You have to look out and not thin when it is too hot and dry.

When it comes to thinning, our method would be a little different than the man growing beets for market. You can readily see that when you have got to pull and remove the top from every beet, the larger they are and less in number the less cost in harvesting and handling, and we think more weight per acre, so we thin for that object.

A Fascinating Book.

Lovers of J. Henri Fabre, that marvelous student of insect life, will be delighted with Eugene Evrard's "Mystery of the Hive." Fabre was well called "The Homer of the Insect." He tells the story of his long and patient observations, not in the dry and technical language of the scientist, but in the language of a gifted poet whose imagination makes the world of his investigation as real and living as if it were peopled with the most interesting and brilliant personalities. Eugene Evrard is a worthy successor. One almost forgets that he is not reading Fabre as he follows the author in his devoted and affectionate study of the bee. Endowed like Fabre with rare power of imagination, he has so used this power as to make his book as fascinating as a novel. Yet let no one think as he reads Evrard that he is in the realm of romance instead of that of science. Here is the charm that was Fabre's. There were those who, missing in Fabre the dull, many syllabled words of the mere scientist, thought his stories of wasp and fly and beetle could not be of scientific value. The world learned better, however, toward his later days and crowned him with the glory that was his due—recognized him as among the greatest of all entomologists.

It is hoped Evrard's book will have a wide reading. It deepens our interest in that world of life about us of which so many of us know nothing and yet which has its source where we have ours. No one can read this book without feeling anew the mystery of life and without new wonder and admiration for that tiny being of the hive that makes it almost a sacred thing; no one can read it without feeling a tenderer regard for all subhuman life.

Cooperative Hay Shipments.

Thirty carloads of Maine hay have been shipped co-operatively out of Skowhegan and Bangor to Georgia and the Carolinas, through the assistance of a joint agricultural committee representing the State Chamber of Commerce, the state department of agriculture, and the college extension service. More than seventy more carloads have been contracted for. This is the first time Maine farmers have ever cooperatively shipped hay to the South. A central grading station has been established at Cumberland Center, near Portland. The Maine Central has granted a stop-over privilege there to cover the time required for grading. The hay is mostly a mixture of light clover and No. 2 timothy.

The Volstead Act Among Ants.

It is said there is need of a Volstead act among ants. Professor Paul Linder, chief of the German fermenting industry institute in Berlin, who thinks he knows, is authority for this. He says ants manufacture home brew and always have manufactured it. They do this in their digestive canals by the action of yeasts on the milky juices which they extract from aphids or plant lice. They go it about as strong as rum runners. That is, they keep the aphids in slavery for the sole purpose of satisfying their appetites.

A High Producer at Greenfields.

The cow Mabel Lyons Soldene, No. 530747, a senior four year old, has just completed the following advanced registry records, at Greenfields, the farm of L. E. McIntire & Son, East Waterford:

Milk seven days, 585 9 lbs; butter seven days, 28.04 lbs.; milk thirty days, 2535 8 lbs; butter 30 days, 111 38 lbs. She is a daughter of King Lyons Joh, No. 227598, who now has twenty-four advanced registry daughters to his credit.

Cow's Accident Profitable.

A cow owned by C. T. Johnson of Los Angeles, Calif., fell into a well on her boss' ranch near Needles, Calif. She was just an ordinary kind of a cow with no record worth bragging about. It was necessary to preserve the well, so a gang of men hoisted her out with a derrick. She came up with glittering particles clinging to her hoof. Investigation showed that her hoof had uncovered a rich vein of gold.

SOUTH PARIS.

Mrs. John Fessenden of Mechanic Falls was in town a day or two the first of last week.

Mrs. Ida J. Bonney, who has been with her sister, Mrs. J. D. Haynes, during the winter, returned to her home in Sumner Friday.

Mrs. Lillian A. Shaw, who has been in Massachusetts for some weeks, returned Thursday to her home here.

Shaw's Orchestra plays this week at Mechanic Falls Friday evening and at Norway Saturday evening (and every Saturday evening).

Mrs. L. A. Rounds, who has spent the winter with her children in Boston and South Yarmouth, Mass., returned to her home here the first of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Morton arrived home Thursday evening from a trip of nearly five weeks through the Atlantic coast and southeastern states, going as far as Atlanta.

The last program of the Euterpean Club for the season will be given at the home of Mrs. Stella Burnham, probably on Tuesday evening, April 29. This will be a concerted program with two pianos, an organ and two violins.

Mrs. Clara Whittle has rented her house on Gothic Street to E. C. Butts, who has been living in L. F. Schoff's upper rent. Mrs. Whittle will go to Portland to live with her son, Robert L. Whittle, as soon as a rent can be secured there.

The severe rain of Monday swelled the rivers and brooks to more than banks full and washed the roads leading into the village to some extent, but did no serious damage locally. No serious damage was done in the state but others did not fare so well.

Mrs. Ida Titcomb, who has been for some time in Peabody, Mass., and in Portland with her son Chester Easson, has been the guest during the past week of her daughter, Mrs. Howard W. Shaw. She left Thursday for Berkeley, Calif., where she will make her home for the present with her son Ralph B. Easson.

E. A. Houstin of Worcester, Mass., was in the village several days last week. Mr. Houstin is an old newspaper man, having been for many years a reporter and editorial writer on the Manchester (N. H.) Union. He has also been connected with papers in Worcester, where he now lives. Mr. Houstin has a hobby of collecting pictures of curiosities in rock, particularly profile pictures like the old man of the White Mountains. He greatly desires to get a picture of the drift boulder on the Paris Hill road.

The Euterpean Club held its annual meeting with Mrs. Grace Fogg last Monday evening, when a covered dish supper was served. The last program of the club for the season will be given some time the last of the month. The officers elected for the coming year are:

Pres.—Mrs. Madge Gray.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Eva Titus.
Sec.—Mrs. Bernice Wilson.
Treas.—Mrs. Agnes Perkins.
Ex. Com.—Mrs. Clara Mosher, Mrs. Stella Burnham, Mrs. Laura Burke.
Librarian—Mrs. Madge Gray.
Press Reporter—Mrs. Agnes Morton.

Dana Ross of Auburn, who, as many know, is the Fleischmann yeast representative visiting this village some three times each week, coming in summer in a lemon colored Ford runabout and in the winter by rail, visited the village on Tuesday for the first time in many months. Mr. Ross has been very sick during the winter, his life being despaired of. Mr. Ross is a victim of diabetes. He had an acute attack last fall so that he had to give up his work. He was taken to a Boston hospital more dead than alive, and given a treatment of the newly discovered insulin, and has recovered sufficiently to be on the road again. His friends are glad to see him back.

On the Problem of Crime.

Professor Austin H. MacCormick of Bowdoin College gave the address at the last program meeting for the season of the Community Club Tuesday afternoon. His subject had been announced as Prison Reform, on which he is eminently qualified to speak. As parts of his investigations of prisons, Professor MacCormick once spent a week as a voluntary prisoner in the Maine state prison, and was later for some years second in command at the United States naval prison at Portsmouth, N. H., under Thomas Mott Osborne, who was then commandant of the prison.

In his address on Tuesday he enlarged his topic beyond the consideration of prison reform merely, and took up the whole subject of the problem of crime. That the United States has the unenviable record of having the most crime of any civilized country is shown by statistics, and the figures which the speaker gave, comparing us with England, are startling to those who have not already heard these statistics.

Three influences operate to prevent the suppression of crime; the inefficiency of the police, who are frequently the football of politics; the delay and uncertainty of the courts, with the modern institution of the professional bondsman; and the character of the prisons. Prisons are supposed to be places where the criminal is turned away from crime, but they have been places which have tended to confirm their inmates in lives of crime. Brutal punishments brutalize society. Imprisonment in the form which treats the prisoner not as a human being but as a brute, will never reform him. There has been advance in many of our states, but in something like one third of the states the old brutal punishments are still inflicted.

Thomas Mott Osborne's contribution to prison reform was the establishment of a system of self-government, in which the prisoners are made to feel a sense of responsibility, and as members of the small community within the walls are trained to appreciate their duty as citizens and members of the larger community without.

Referring to the Maine state prison, Professor MacCormick said that the recent fire there had accomplished more for the betterment of conditions than the legislature could be induced to do. It had even done better than he should have thought possible. It destroyed the old stone cell block, which he supposed couldn't be burned if it was stuffed with hay and soaked with kerosene.

A Tart Reply.

There was quite a congregation of drummers at the depot, South Paris, the other night—something not at all uncommon. Some of them had been on the road quite a number of years, and some were newcomers. As they waited they "chinned" each other to quite an extent. A drummer never gets mad, no matter what is said. Forbearance in that way is part of his training, and it comes pretty near being lesson No. 1. They all belong to the drummers' union, only they don't call it "union," the nearest they get to is "organization."

Among those gathered at the station was an old timer from Auburn they called Henry. He carried a rather disreputable looking leather bag, that had been banged about baggage cars and crowded under wagon seats until it was hard telling what it was.

After him came a young man from the same city they called Harry. He had a new shiny outfit. After he had seated himself he eyed the other man's sample case and finally remarked:

"Henry, about the 25th of next December, I think the Traveling Men's Association had better give you a new bag."

"Don't do it," replied Henry, "or they will put me into the same inexperienced class with you. My old customers will think I'm a new man and won't trade with me."

Judge Barnes.

People in Oxford County are interested in the appointment of Charles P. Barnes as associate justice of the Supreme Judicial Court to succeed Associate Justice George M. Hanson of Calais, lately deceased, because he was a prominent citizen of the county for a number of years.

Mr. Barnes was born in Houlton Oct. 12, 1869, the son of Francis and Ida (Putnam) Barnes. He received his education in the public schools of Houlton, Ricker Classical Institute and Colby College. He graduated from the latter institution in 1892, but continued his work there in a post-graduate course for a year, receiving his master's degree the following year. From his graduation he taught school until 1899, being principal of the high schools in Lisbon Falls, Norway, and Attleboro, Mass. After leaving his teaching he continued his school work for some ten years by being superintendent of the Norway schools.

Having decided on the law as a life work, he went to Portland and studied law with the late Judge Joseph W. Symonds. He was admitted to the Oxford Bar in 1900 and opened an office in Norway. He was county attorney for Oxford County from 1904 to 1909, and assistant attorney general of Maine from 1909 to 1911. In this latter year he returned to his native town, Houlton, and became associated with Congressman Ira G. Hersey.

He has been very prominent in Houlton, being a trustee of the public library, and a member of the school board, and represented her in Legislature in the sessions of 1917, 1919 and 1921, being speaker of the House in 1921.

He is a Republican in politics, and was permanent chairman of the state convention in Portland recently.

Beside these activities he is a trustee of Ricker Classical Institute, which is situated in Houlton; and in 1913 was appointed a member for Maine to the National Association for Uniform State Laws.

Mr. Barnes married Miss Annie M. Richardson of Norway in 1896, and they have several children.

At the Howard Young galleries in New York City is listed one of Ben Foster's paintings, now on exhibition there. This is "In Maine," which portrays a scene, showing coast, evergreens against fleecy clouds in sky, the foreground being a point of land projecting into rippling water. Ben Foster was born in North Anson, and acquired considerable fame, being a member of the National Academy.

Alarmed at the silence of the pet canary of Mrs. Mary T. Barrett, neighbors tried the door of the woman's apartment in the Trelawney building, Portland, Me., found it locked and summoned police. Entrance was effected and Mrs. Barrett, widely known Christian Science practitioner, was found dead in a chair, fully clothed.

A chum of the same age tried to lift the beam, but his strength was not sufficient. Ivory's pet Airedale came to the rescue and after he barked unavailingly for aid, tugged with the other boy at the injured lad's coat until he was dragged from under the beam. Here and There.

Migrations human, animal and insect have been periodic in all ages and all parts of the world, and have always been notable events. The state of Maine and the County of Oxford have not been forgotten in these migrations. Elderly people can remember the army worm invasion of about half a century ago; and a grasshopper inroad which came a few years previous. They were disagreeable, but also interesting visitations. Any such abnormal thing cannot fail of attracting attention. There is an insect incursion on in California at the present time that is creating interest in that state. It is an invasion of butterflies from Mexico into the southern part of the state traveling as far north as Los Angeles, one hundred and seventy five miles north of the border. They are what are called "Painted ladies." The movement lasted two weeks or more. They traveled in dense clouds, alighting on posts, houses, or in fact anything upon which they could gain a footing and covering such places with a brilliant coating, much as browntail moths turned posts and houses in Oxford County a few years ago, into the semblance of a layer of snow. Even the radiators of automobiles were plastered with varicolored wings. Such a foray has not been unknown in the past, the last one before this having occurred in 1901.

Captain Kidd has been responsible for many hunting expeditions. There is scarcely an island along the Atlantic seaboard fronting North America that has not been explored for treasure supposed to have been hidden by him there. One of these dots on the Connecticut shore of Long Island Sound, known as Thimble Island, is one of them. Recently a curious ring of old English make was found there. It was oddly shaped, in fact four bands joined by clasped hands. It tallies closely to one once owned by British royalty, but which disappeared from the English Court in 1610. It was worn by Lady Catherine Grey when she married the Earl of Hertford. Queen Elizabeth did not like the union so she sent Hertford to the tower, and subjected Lady Catherine to many hardships. The ring disappeared. But how did it get to Thimble Island is the present question, and was it a part of the booty of Captain Kidd and, if so, how did he obtain possession of it?

As Democrat readers know, archaeologists have been digging about Ur for some little time and they think they have discovered the oldest building standing above ground. It is a small square temple built by the Sumerian King Aannipadda about 4500 B. C., almost twice the age of relics found in the tomb of King Tut.

The colyumist of the Lewiston Journal confesses that he doesn't like maple syrup or maple sugar. What about such a man, anyway? Is he shameless, or merely unspeakably unfortunate?

Oxford County Notes.

All of the service men who were at the Oxford Spring Sanatorium, burned last week, have been transferred to other institutions.

A wolf was killed by Robert Greer in Center Minot a few days ago which has created considerable excitement throughout the state. It was the first wolf killed in the state for half a century, and the question is where did he come from. The wolf has been roaming about the country for some weeks according to his ululating howls which have been heard all the way from Streaked Mountain in Paris to the city of Auburn. There was some question as to the variety. Experts claimed it was a Dakota wolf; but of late a Hebron man, Charles Everett, has come to the fore and claimed he had this wolf in captivity, or one like him, and he says he was a Canadian wood wolf. This animal weighed 75 pounds and was prowling around Mr. Greer's building when he was shot. Mr. Everett says the wolf was tame and not dangerous.

A Lewiston high school girl who attempted to set a fad at the school by appearing in classes with names and initials of young men printed on her light colored stockings, was promptly squelched. For the last few months it has been a fad of both boys and girls to print the names of friends on jackets and the authorities refused to frown on such a fad, but to carry the names of acquaintances around on shapely ankles was considered a bit too much.

A Bath family owns a cat brought up on evaporated milk, which refuses to drink fresh milk. The cat's mother was killed accidentally while the kitten was small, and its mistress fed it evaporated milk with a teaspoon. Since that time the cat will not drink any other milk unless forced by hunger to do so.

Practically every one in this region of heavy thunder storms rests easier for the knowledge that their buildings are wholly or partially covered by fire insurance. Others go further and install lightning rods to avert, if possible, the danger of having their homes burned. But how many of these foresighted people have looked ahead to the time when they need personal insurance, and paid their premium on it in the shape of a donation to the church fair?

Last Saturday was the sixty-third anniversary of the assault on Fort Sumpter and the beginning of a four years' war for the preservation, unity and perpetuity of our now great united nation. We can hardly realize the fact, but memory of it still lingers.

While some persons occupying high and responsible positions in our national government have been unworthy, incompetent and dishonest, recreant to the trust and obligations entrusted to them, and justice has been meted out to them, there are yet many honorable, honest, reliable men in the councils of the nation, who are not to be bought or sold for political expediency. It is gratifying to know that we yet have one at the helm who will pilot the old ship of state, keep her off the rocks, weather the present gale and keep the old flag at the mast head. And Calvin Coolidge is the man.

Our Coolidge is the man,
Our Coolidge is the man,
He's up to date in a nation great,
Our Coolidge is the man.

The barrel is tipped at an angle which makes it impossible for you to see its contents unless you get close to the window, but you can glimpse a nest of straw, which, if you believe in signs, leads you to suppose that a live snake is coiled up in it. But that's where you are fooled, for if you rubber into the barrel you see a pretty pink baby's rattle.

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH (1924 MODEL)

Under an ad for gasoline
The village smithy stands;
He's agent for the Jinx machine
And several other brands.
He hasn't shod a horse for years,
For fear he'd soil his hands.

He wears a gold watch on his wrist,
A pearl pin in his tie,
His links are made of amethyst,
The finest he could buy.
There's not a thing the smithy wears
That doesn't please the eye.

He has a staff of skillful men
That number twenty-four,
Who toil from six A. M. till ten
And sometimes even more.
The smithy never does a stroke—
He thinks that work's a bore.

He goes on Sunday to the kirk,
His mind quite free from cares,
Because his men are hard at work
With punctures and repairs.
And if the weather's fine and warm
The smith says grateful prayers.
—Percy Maxim

To Contributors and Advertisers.

Next Saturday is Patriots' Day, a legal holiday. The Democrat office hasn't had a holiday since Christmas, and will take a day off.

Now Saturday is a very inconvenient day for a Democrat holiday. It means that after five o'clock Friday night there remains about four type-setting hours before our forms are closed Monday noon. Only the most important matter can be put in type in that short time. So on your account and ours, please get copy possible to us so that we may be able to get it in type before Friday night.

Thank you.

I wish to make acknowledgement and express my thanks for the shower of post cards, and the cake and flowers sent me by friends on my recent birthday.

J. G. LITTLEFIELD.

Mrs. Lucelia C. Morton.

After an illness of about four weeks, from which it appeared at times that she would rally, Mrs. Lucelia C. Morton died at her home in South Paris at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, at the age of 83 years. Up to her final illness she had been physically very active for one of her years, and her mental clearness and activity were in no degree impaired.

Mrs. Morton came of old New England stock. She was the eldest child of Elbridge and Julia (Prentiss) Forbes, and was born in Paris Sept. 20, 1840. She married Henry F. Morton, who was the founder of the business which has developed into what is now the Paris Manufacturing Company, principally owned in the Morton family.

This business was started in a small way by Mr. Morton at West Sumner, where they lived for some years. In the early seventies it was established on Paris Hill, where it ran for a dozen years or so. It was then moved to South Paris. For a short time Mr. Morton was superintendent of a factory in Binghamton, N. Y., and later had a similar position in Rutland, Vt., but the family many years ago returned to South Paris, which has since been their home. Mr. Morton died in December, 1900.

She is survived by four sons, William P. Morton, Geo. R. Morton, Harry A. Morton and Clarence G. Morton, all of South Paris, and one daughter, Miss Julia P. Morton, who has made her home with her mother. Another son, Walter P., died many years ago. There are six grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. She is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. Clara A. Bessey of Stoneham, Mass., and Mrs. Mary H. Crockett of South Paris, and one brother, Arthur E. Forbes of South Paris, and by numerous other more distant relatives.

In early life Mrs. Morton became a member of the Baptist church, and when the South Paris Baptist church was formed, her membership was transferred to that. Throughout her life she was devoted to the work of the church and its auxiliaries, and all that they stand for. She was also a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, was interested in the news of the day, and was a supporter of every good cause. She was a woman of the highest type of Christian character, and beloved by all who knew her.

The funeral will be held at the residence at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Elizabeth D. Buck.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dunham Buck, widow of Charles T. Buck, died at her home on Skillings Avenue, Monday last, at the advanced age of 86 years, and after an illness of several weeks.

Mrs. Buck was born in Paris April 10, 1838, the daughter of Eleazer and Abigail (Paine) Dunham. Her education was received in the public schools of her native town, and most of her life has been spent in the town.

Mrs. Buck had been twice married, her first husband being M. M. Stinchfield, who lived but a few years, and her second husband was Charles T. Buck. They lived a while on the old homestead at Snow's Falls, but about fifteen years ago moved to South Paris, living at first on Gothic Street, and later on Skillings Avenue. Her second husband died about thirteen years ago.

Mrs. Buck leaves two sons, Dr. Charles L. Buck of South Paris and George E. Buck of Boston.

She was a member of Deering Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, South Paris, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic and Paris Grange, South Paris, and Onward Rebekah Lodge, West Paris.

The funeral Wednesday afternoon was attended by Rev. H. G. McGlauflin. Burial will be at West Paris.

Jefferson J. Merrill.

The body of Jefferson J. Merrill arrived in South Paris Saturday for interment.

Mr. Merrill died in the Trull Hospital, Biddeford, on Wednesday.

He was born in Milton, this state, October 4, 1861, the son of Samuel and Auvilla (Poland) Merrill. In his early life he worked in his native town, then came to Paris Hill to work in the plant of the Paris Manufacturing Co., and when that was moved to South Paris went to that village to live. He has lived in Saco quite a number of years.

When in South Paris he joined the Odd Fellows, both lodge and encampment, and was noble grand of the first and chief patriarch of the second.

He leaves a wife and one son, H. I. Merrill of Saco.

The funeral was Friday at his home in Saco.

Mt. Mica Lodge of Odd Fellows and Mt. Pleasant Rebekah Lodge met the remains and the accompanying relatives at the train Saturday forenoon, and escorted them to Riverside Cemetery for burial.

Mrs. Florence Patch.

The remains of Mrs. Florence Patch, a former resident here, were brought to South Paris last Monday night, and on Tuesday there was a prayer service at Pine Grove Cemetery, conducted by Rev. H. G. McGlauflin. Burial was in the Noble family lot in that cemetery. The remains were accompanied by Mrs. Gertrude Gray and Mr. and Mrs. Guy C. Bean of Freeport.

Mrs. Patch died on the 3d, after an illness of eight days, at Hopkinton, Mass., and the funeral was held at that place. She is survived by four children, Mrs. Gertrude Gray of Freeport, Mary, wife of Guy C. Bean, also of Freeport, John McArdle of Claremont, N. H., and Florence, wife of D. W. MacKinnon of Hopkinton, Mass. Mrs. Patch died at the home of the last named. She is also survived by one brother, Edward H. Noble of the Yagger neighborhood, Norway.

Button-Page.

Lewis C. Button of South Paris and Miss Thelma R. Page of Rochell, Ga., were united in marriage at Rochell on Thursday, April 3. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Page, at 5 P. M., by Rev. B. F. West, pastor of the Rochell Methodist church. A reception followed at 6 o'clock, attended by neighbors and friends.

On their 1400 mile journey to Maine after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Button visited relatives of Mrs. Button in Vidalia, Ga., spent a little time in Washington, where they visited Mr. and Mrs. Louis W. Clark and took in some of the sights of the capital, and visited Mr. Button's sister in Watertown, Mass.

They arrived in South Paris Friday evening last, and were given a lively reception at the station by the members of the Quiet Club and other neighbors and friends, with appropriate quantities of rice and confetti. They will reside here.

EASTER NEAR AT HAND

The Easter showing of New Apparel is ready. Assortments were never more complete and styles never so attractive. Weeks and months of careful planning and selection have brought together an array of which we are justly proud.

We invite you to this showing with the thought that you will find pleasure in inspecting the beautiful garments and materials for your adornment. We want you to come feeling that you are welcome—that you may look around as much as you wish and buy as little as you like—or not at all.

SMART COATS

Exclusive styling, different fabrics and a wide assortment enables one to choose a coat from our extensive stock with a source of pleasure attached to it, particularly if one delights in selecting a mode that reflects individual taste.

Many of the coats have novelty cuffs, pockets and fancy stitching, although many of the most beautiful garments rely on their graceful lines and exquisite fabrics to appeal. Hardly a day goes by that we do not have a shipment of new coats.

Spring Coats, $12.50 up to $49.50

THE SPRING SUITS

Keeping pace with every phase of fashion and adding touches of individuality that make for style distinction, these suits are also notable for many niceties of workmanship, smartly cut collars, well set shoulders and the right fitting sleeves emphasize expert tailoring. Materials are navy blue poiret twill, and attractive sport suitings.

Spring Suits, $24.75 up to $49.75

NEW HOSIERY

In the new Hosiery for Spring now on display may be seen many new colors. As much depends upon material and workmanship for long wearing qualities in stockings, we have chosen our brands from well known manufacturers who use only the best materials and employ modern methods to have their Hosiery enjoy the distinction of being as nearly perfect as human skill can make it.

You can have Gotham "Gold Stripe," Holeproof and Berkshire Hosiery here.

CLEVER SPORT SKIRTS

Fitting in with every hour of the day come these new sport skirts and every woman will see the wisdom of including one or two in her wardrobe. New materials made up into wrappy and pleated models with novel pockets.

New Skirts, $4.95 up to $9.95

UNDERMUSLINS IN DESIRABLE MATERIALS

Just out of their boxes are these exquisitely styled envelope chemises, step-in chemises, princess slips, costume slips, step-in drawers, bloomers, camisoles and petticoats. Extremely lovely are they and distinguished by fine laces and embroideries. A splendid opportunity for women to purchase good supplies of pretty inexpensive under muslins.

THE NEW GLOVE STYLES

While our glove stocks have always been most satisfactory from the standpoint of smart style and serviceable wearing qualities, this season's showing goes even further in allowing pleasing individual choice. Styles are the popular gauntlets and tiny cuffs of imported fabrics and kid gloves are here in the new colors.

SILK CREPE DRESSES

The styles were never more attractive than is revealed in these new dresses. Unusually becoming models of fashionable crepes with clever new trimmings, touches in embroidery, ribbons and laces to emphasize their attractiveness, drapings are used extensively. Many new colors, as well as navy and brown.

New Dresses, $16.75 up to $27.50

Dressing Up Our Kitchens.

When the spring stirs the blood, we are naturally energized to the annual orgy of housecleaning, painting, papering, getting rid of rubbish, and perhaps moving our chattels around from one place to another, on the assumption that a change is good for everything, even a change for the worse.

Suppose that this spring we concentrate on kitchens, and try to make ours the prettiest possible—the kind whose "beauty makes you glad," that you love to get into, that inspires to the best possible work.

In dressing up our kitchens some of us run to an extreme of frills, and some to an extreme of severity. There are kitchens so dressed up in chintz window draperies and dotted muslin sash curtains, in paper lace on shelves and French knots on roller towels, that they are much too dainty to live with—not to speak of working in—and the cooking is done down cellar, or in a back porch. Conversely, among the kitchens we know there is one, which at the advice of a teacher of home economics, was painted all over a "battleship gray" (of all colors in the world!). Commentary, we hope, is unnecessary on "battleship gray" for a kitchen. Another kitchen, for which a so-called "artistic decorator" is responsible, has ochre-colored walls and floor; while the experienced housekeepers of a certain country region, not a thousand miles from our desk, have all of them, with one accord, run to a greater or less dinginess of brown-painted woodwork, that does not show dirt.

There is a certain kitchen that we love. It opens off a dining room of moss-green prevailing tint, and the kitchen is green and white. The walls are covered with wash paper, simulating tiles of creamy white, with a faint stipple of green on their shining glaze. On the floor is a light, gray green linoleum. All the woodwork is white enamel, smooth and easy to wash as a china dish. On the shelves are placed in full sight, and ready to the hand, all the dishes and utensils in common use. Many of these are of fireproof glass, others are of white enamel, grading into pale green. Here and there is the gleam of something coppery; there is a queer jar of tomato red from Naples, a chestnut-colored terrine from France, an odd foreign bowl or pitcher from elsewhere overseas. Also, the mistress of the kitchen has hung Murillo's "Kitchen Angels" over her shelf of cookery books.

Pots of mustard and chives grow in the windows during the close season for growing in the open. These windows are curtainless, there are four of them, they sparkle like the pyrex ware, and make the place as full of light as it can hold. There are no mouldings anywhere, no sharp angles or corners hard to get into. The place can be washed all over—ceiling, walls, and floor—in less time than it takes to tell about it.

To enter this kitchen is like going into a place of refreshment, beauty and cleanliness. It is a place that is difficult to make look untidy, a place one loves to work in, and where it seems easy and delightful to make things that taste good.

War Cake.

Boil together two cups of water, one pound of sugar, one-half a pound of shortening, and one package of seeded raisins for ten minutes after boiling has commenced. Remove from fire, and add three cups and one-half of flour, sifted with two teaspoonfuls of ground cinnamon, one teaspoonful of cloves, and one-half of a grated nutmeg. Also mix with the flour two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of soda, and three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt. The dry ingredients should be added all at once to the boiled mixture, and not doled and trickled in a little at a time, after the incorrigible habit of women in general. They should be just dumped in as you would dump ashes on a heap. This is the one secret of success in this cake. The quick addition of the whole mass of cool, dry ingredients will cool the hot mixture enough to keep the flour from lumping, and will yet retain enough heat slightly to cook the flour, so that the batter will be thick, and will hold up the fruit without fear of sinking. Also, the mixture will be warm when it goes into the pan, and will consequently bake better and more evenly. No danger of this cake being cooked at the edges, and raw in the center. Bake for a good hour in an oven at 350° F. A tube pan is best to use, or an oblong.

Seasonable and Tested Recipes.

BAKED CABBAGE AND BACON.

Slice one-half a head of white cabbage and boil in one cup of milk for twenty minutes, or until soft. Season with pepper, put into a baking dish, and cover the top with slices of nicely streaked bacon. Place on the upper shelf of a hot oven (500° F.) or under the gas in a broiling oven, until the bacon is well browned. Sliced potatoes may be substituted for the bacon, if a maigre dish is desired; and a layer of cheese added after the potatoes have browned, the heat to be continued until the cheese is melted.

FINNAN HADDIE WITH BACON SCRAPS AND POTATOES.

Soak for an hour in cold, sweet milk a finnan haddie weighing one pound; then heat slowly in the milk until it can be flaked apart. Cook on a hot pan six thin slices of breakfast bacon, cutting them into small strips, crosswise. When beginning to brown, add to the pan two tablespoonfuls of flour, stir until smooth, then add a cup of creamy milk, stir until thick, then add the flaked fish, and three cold, boiled potatoes, cut into slices. Stir the whole over the fire until hot through, season to taste with salt and pepper, and serve with steamed cucumbers in tomato sauce.

CARROTS, HUNGARIAN STYLE

Cut medium-sized carrots lengthwise in quarters, and then crosswise in half-inch segments until there are three cups. Cook until tender in boiling, salted water, and drain. Put into a saucepan with one tablespoonful of butter, one-half a cup of vinegar, and three-fourths a cup of sugar, and cook, tossing lightly with a fork, now and then, to keep from burning, until the carrots are transparent. These are particularly good to serve with steak, chops, or any kind of broiled meat.

SIRLOIN FILLET OF BEEF, ROASTED.

Draw into the best surface of the fillet of beef, salt pork lardoons (strips of fat salt pork one-eighth of an inch thick); cut the lardoons of a good length so they may be tied in a knot; sprinkle with salt, dredge with flour, and roast three-quarters of an hour in a very hot oven. Serve with riced potato.

BREAD AND-RHUBARB PUDDING.

In the bottom of a baking dish place strips of rhubarb two inches long, and sift over them about half their bulk of sugar. Over this place slices of stale, buttered bread, with the buttered side down; then arrange another layer of rhubarb and sugar, and lastly cover with bread. Beat one egg with four tablespoonfuls of sugar and one-half of a grated nutmeg, add two cups of milk, and pour all over the bread and rhubarb. Cover and bake for half an hour, or until rhubarb is tender in an oven at 400° F. Remove cover to brown the bread. Spread grape or any other jelly over the top before serving, and cover with either a meringue or whipped cream. If a meringue is used, brown slightly in the oven before bringing to the table.

MACAROON CREAM.

A quickly prepared dessert. Dry out in the oven a dozen macaroons, roll, and sift. Beat these into one cup of cream, during the process of whipping, sweeten to taste with powdered sugar, and serve in small sundae glasses, with a garnish of any bright colored preserve. This furnishes a dessert in an emergency, or it may be used for a sauce. With a gelatine jelly of orange or lemon it is particularly good.

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Gadgett, proudly, "we can trace our ancestors back to—to—well, I don't know exactly who, but we've been descending for centuries."

Oil Conservation Board Named by President.

Admiral Hilary P. Jones, U. S. N., Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and George Otis Smith of Skowhegan, Maine, Director of the Geological Survey Bureau. Admiral Jones and Mr. Smith, with R. G. Bush, compose the new special Oil Investigation Board. This special board is entrusted with the work of planning a system of creating a permanent reserve of the nation's oil properties.

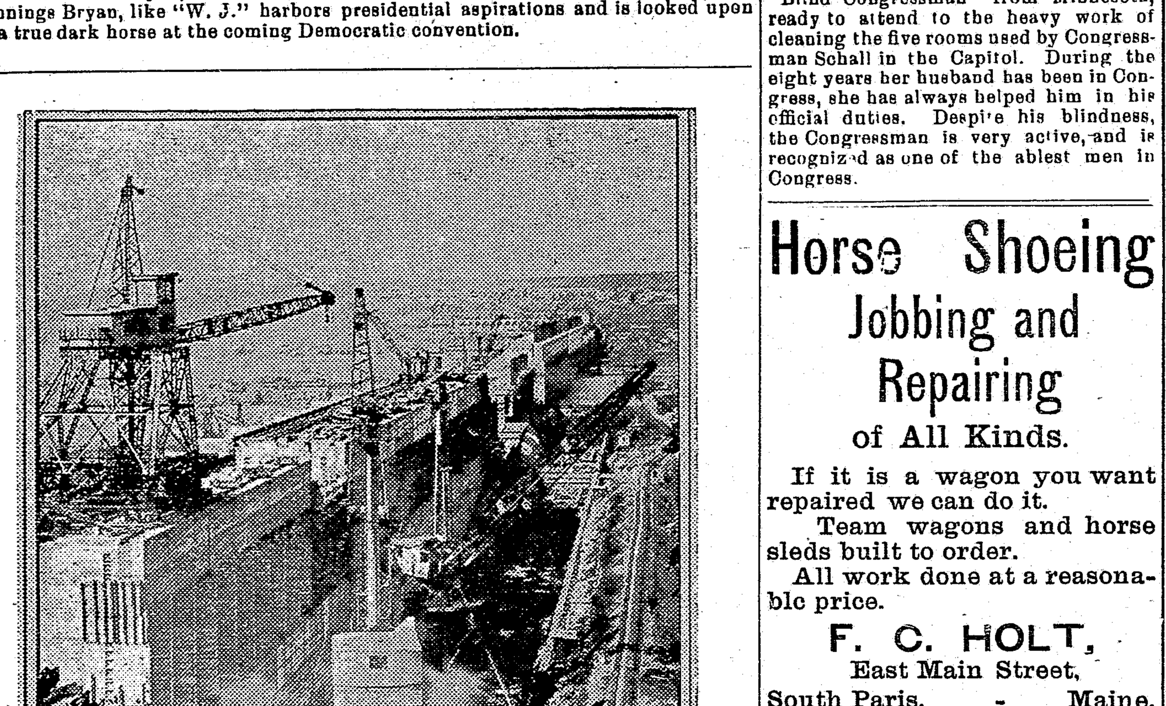

Another Bryan a Presidential Possibility.

Charles G. Bryan, Governor of Nebraska and brother of the famous William Jennings Bryan, like "W. J." harbors presidential aspirations and is looked upon as a true dark horse at the coming Democratic convention.

A Secretary in Overalls.

Mrs. Thomas D. Schall, wife of the "Blind Congressman" from Minnesota, ready to attend to the heavy work of cleaning the five rooms used by Congressman Schall in the Capitol. During the eight years her husband has been in Congress, she has always helped him in his official duties. Despite his blindness, the Congressman is very active, and is recognized as one of the ablest men in Congress.

Developing Muscle Shoals.

The Muscle Shoals water power project as it appears to-day, slightly more than half completed. Four thousand five hundred men are at work on the project. The power house is in the foreground and in the background may be seen the dam and the lock. When the 600,000 H. P. machinery is installed, the total cost of the dam will amount to $50,000,000. It is being built by the War Department of the United States Government.

Combination Animal Lives on Ants.

For the first time in twelve years the London Zoo has an ant bear, or aard vark, as the Boers call it. With its great claws it tears down ant hills and thrusts its long tongue into the squirming thousands of occupants. It came from South Africa.

To be the owner of one of five existing $20 bills issued by the United States under date of 1779 is the fortune of Fred Adams, a former Castine man, now living in Boston. Mr. Adams has had the bill for some time and valued it because of its age, but did not know of its rarity until he read in a newspaper a story of one of these bills which is owned by a man living in Framingham, Mass. The story carried a fac-simile of the bill and its owner, W. F. Gates, who had learned that there are in existence only four others like it. One of these, he had discovered, is in the possession of L. M. Potts of Columbus, Ind., and the ownership of the other three was unknown to him. When Mr. Adams saw the story he recalled that he had an old bill much like the one owned by Mr. Gates, and upon comparison found them to be identical, except for the signature they bear. The bill is about two by three inches in size, and "entitles the bearer to receive twenty Spanish dollars or an equal sum in gold or silver, according to a resolution of congress of the 14th of January, 1779."

Two men toiled wearily at demolishing an old block on Main Street in Biddeford, their throats parched by the dust arising from their efforts. Bricks fell away from a secret chamber in the wall, and within reposed two ancient appearing jugs that bore some sort of liquid and the smell of alcohol. The workmen thought naturally of home brew, but swallows verified the jug markings, which affirmed that the liquor was New England rum made 75 years ago. There were two gallons in the lot. Stories are told of men working on the cellar of an old house in one of Bath's suburbs, finding a jug of similar liquor in a carefully concealed hide, where it had been safe for many decades.

New Subdivision
—OF—
Real Estate.

Residents of South Paris and vicinity who would like to acquire sufficient land for a family garden which they may farm while still living in the village, or who are tenants and would like to secure a home site on which to build later on, are herewith offered an exceptional opportunity to purchase such property. The lots for sale are within easy distance of Market Square and at extremely low prices in view of the size of the lots, nearby location and quality of soil.

The land is that almost wholly level and sunny expanse of garden loam on the east side of High Street a short distance above the Swift Railroad Crossing. The land is very early, well-drained and easily worked and a few feet beneath the surface the finest quality of water is to be found. Each lot has a broad frontage on High Street and is graded in price according to its nearness to Market Square. The title is perfect.

The town tax rate according to the recent revaluation ranges from sixty-two cents to one dollar and fourteen cents an acre. As the lots are just beyond the corporation limits no corporation tax will have to be paid. It should be recognized that in the expansion of the population of South Paris the only available outlet to home sites with ample garden acreage is out High Street. Elsewhere such property is very difficult to find.

POISON! POISON!

Are you prepared to meet the enemy who stands ready to sap the first and last particle of vitality from every form of plant food that grows?

We have the agency for the Niagara Sprayer Co. and are taking orders for their poisons which will be shipped March 1st. We will be pleased to take your order.

Dust or Spray or the Devil's to pay!
Now dope this out as best you may.
Throw sulphur in their eyes—if it don't kill them dead
Then give them a sprinkling of Arsenate of Lead.
